Don Strock Listed 3rd

There's a chance scouts may change their thinking when the pro draft is held Jan. 30 in New York but if NFL teams were making their selections this week, Virginia Tech's Don Strock would apparently be the third quarterback chosen.

The Sporting News announced Friday its 1972 All-American football team, picked on the basis of professional scouting reports and recommendations, and LSU's Bert Jones was listed as the quarterback and player of the year.

The All-American team then carried a special mention category, with Florida State's Gary Huff and Tech's Strock named as quarterbacks.

The complete first team included three picks from Nebraska — Johnny Rodgers, Rich Glover and Willie Harper.
