Problems on top of problems

BLACKBURG—If he didn't already have enough hours of hard work to do, Bob McTavish didn't have the least bit of rest.

The Oregon State Sports Editor was a veritable hustler.

This is not to say that some of his players might not be crying a little with exertion. They might be getting a bit tired. Bob McTavish himself is churning his way, making it a point to try to keep up with them.

"But I'm certainly not going up and I really don't think the Mascot can get any more tired," said Bob McTavish with a smile.

There isn't enough disappointment in the Toc dressing room here Saturday afternoon after the Oregon State-Mascot football game at the Black Bears' Camp.

It is safe to assume that some of his players might not be crying a little with exertion. They might be getting a bit tired.

Bob McTavish himself is churning his way, making it a point to try to keep up with them.

"But I'm certainly not going up and I really don't think the Mascot can get any more tired," said Bob McTavish with a smile.

There isn't enough disappointment in the Toc dressing room here Saturday afternoon after the Oregon State-Mascot football game at the Black Bears' Camp.

It is safe to assume that some of his players might not be crying a little with exertion. They might be getting a bit tired.

Bob McTavish himself is churning his way, making it a point to try to keep up with them.

"But I'm certainly not going up and I really don't think the Mascot can get any more tired," said Bob McTavish with a smile.