BILL CLAY
Leaves South Carolina

Bill Clay heads Tech defenses

BY BOB MCLELLAND
Landmark News Service

BLACKSBURG — Bill Clay will return to Virginia Tech as defensive coordinator.

Clay, who worked as a coach of linebackers at Tech and at the University of Virginia, leaves the same position at the University of South Carolina.

He is expected to join the Tech staff, headed by Charlie Coffey, Wednesday. He succeeds George McKinney, who resigned as defensive coordinator after a season in which Tech set records for points yield.

Clay was graduated from the University of Arkansas and played professionally at Springfield, Mass. and at Norfolk in the Continental League.

Clay became head coach of Granby High and was a winner until called to Virginia.