Rogers, Walk-on Spark
Tech's Spring Windup

By Ray Flieger
Time-Dispatch Sports Writer

It wasn't the beginning, but it was the end. In its simplest sense each spring season, each spring game, each spring start for Tech football is the start of the new season, the new year. It is the day when the first team is on the field, and the second team is out. It is the day when the season begins.

The new Golden courthouse, built in 1963 for spring football, was the backdrop for the spring game. The new courthouse, located at the corner of 13th and Main Streets, was the scene of a typical spring day in Atlanta. The sun was shining, the birds were singing, and the air was fresh. It was a perfect day for a spring game.

The game was won by the first team, 17-14, but it was the second team that stole the show. The second team, led by the senior quarterback, was the team to watch. The quarterback, a senior, was the leader of the team, and his presence was felt throughout the game. He directed the team with confidence and skill, and his leadership was evident in every play.

The game was not without its drama. In the first quarter, the first team was leading 10-0, but the second team rallied and scored two touchdowns to tie the game. In the second half, the first team regained the lead, but the second team fought back and scored two touchdowns to take the lead. The game was close throughout, and the energy on the field was palpable.

The spring game is a preview of what is to come. It is a time for the team to get in shape, to get used to each other, and to get into the rhythm of things. It is a chance to see who is ready to play, who is not, and who needs improvement. It is a chance to see what the team is made of and what needs to be worked on.

The spring game is a time for celebration. It is a time for the team to come together, to bond, and to have fun. It is a time for the coaches to evaluate their players and to make decisions about the team. It is a time for the fans to see their team in action and to get excited about the upcoming season.

So, as the spring game comes to an end, the team goes on to the next step. They will continue to work hard, to improve, and to prepare for the upcoming season. They will look back on this spring game with fond memories, and they will look forward to what is to come.