JIMMY SHARPE made quite an impression on Tech supporters at a gathering in Bristol this week.

The new Virginia Tech head football coach had made certain that nothing would be left unsaid. He knew of the importance of featuring Tech football at all times and for all events. He told the assembled crowd that Tech football was not a game to be taken lightly.

"This year," he said, "we're going to make Tech football a way of life. We're going to show the world what Tech football can do. We're going to win games, and we're going to do it with style."

The crowd was silent, listening to the new coach's words. They knew they had a new leader, one who would take Tech football to new heights.

SHARPE, who had been a star quarterback at Virginia Tech, had a plan. He knew that the success of Tech football depended on the support of the fans. He had promised to work hard to make Tech football a Force to be reckoned with.

"And that's why," he said, "I'm here. I'm here to make Tech football a force to be reckoned with. I'm here to make sure that Tech football is respected."

The crowd cheered, and Sharpe continued his speech. He talked about the importance of teamwork and hard work. He reminded the fans that Tech football was more than just a game; it was a way of life.

"It's not just a game," he said. "It's a way of life. It's a way to live. It's a way to be."

The crowd cheered again, and Sharpe finished his speech. He knew that the fans were on his side, and he was ready to lead Tech football to glory.
