From Wire and Staff Dispatches

Allan Bristow of Virginia Tech and Barry Parkhill of Virginia have a mutual problem—but a nice one. It’s one that involves their professional careers and their pocketbooks.

The two basketball stars will spend the next few days, huddled with their agent, Norman Blass, deciding the best spot for them to play professional basketball.

Both were drafted by the Virginia Squires of the American Basketball Association yesterday but both had been picked the day before by teams in the National Basketball Association.