Virginia Tech Loses Fourth Straight Games

by DON TODORA

You're Virginia Tech quarterback Mitchell Barnes...you are calling the signals from your own one-yardline...you look up from your position behind the center...you see the VMI goal 99 yards away...you see the scoreboard even further back. It's fourth down...eleven yards to go for the first down...about two minutes left to play...VMI is leading 22-17. The snap comes from center...you take it...you roll to your left...the VM defense comes inside the five-yardline on both ends of the field. On the opening play of the game, Virginia Tech had no opposition until they got to the Keydet one-yardline. At that point VMI's defense took over.

The Techmen couldn't advance the ball past the two-point conversion. At that point VMI's defense took over. The Techmen couldn't advance the ball past the Keydet one-yardline. At that point VMI's defense took over. The Techmen couldn't advance the ball past the two-point conversion. At that point VMI's defense took over.

The Techmen couldn't advance the ball past the two-point conversion. At that point VMI's defense took over. The Techmen couldn't advance the ball past the two-point conversion. At that point VMI's defense took over.

The Techmen couldn't advance the ball past the two-point conversion. At that point VMI's defense took over. The Techmen couldn't advance the ball past the two-point conversion. At that point VMI's defense took over.