Tribe Retains
Title on Track

By Ray Filegar
Virginia Tech couldn’t catch William & Mary looking ahead, even if the Indians were, and the king of college track in Virginia is yet to be dethroned.

For the 13th consecutive time, the Indians walked, er, ran off with the Virginia Intercollegiate Outdoor Track and Field Championship yesterday, beating the Gobblers, 118½-98, at Richmond’s Pitt Field. If that score portrays a two-team affair, it was. And, it was expected.

Unexpected, to a degree, was the fact the Gobblers held the upperhand for a large part of the day, giving up the lead only when the Indians swept the first three places in the triple jump, led by Ted Wingerd’s jump of 49-7. That, late in the afternoon, signalled a return to normalcy and left some wondering if the Tribe hadn’t done only what was necessary to extend their streak.

“That sounds a little like a left-handed compliment,” said coach John Randolph, with a hint of amusement. No flat denial followed, however, only, “we think we know what we have to do.”

Admittedly, the Indians were
